

PRESS RELEASE

May 7, 2010

JHP is pleased to be named as a Community Stewardship Award winner in the 2010 Envision Central Texas Community Stewardship Awards.

“The Envision Central Texas Community Stewardship awards program has been created to recognize and honor the innovative people, projects, and the processes that are addressing the growth challenges facing our region in ways that will move people closer to a vision for our future that preserves and enhances our natural resources, economic vitality, social equity, and overall quality of living.”

For additional information on the Envision Central Texas Community Stewardship Awards, go to <http://www.envisioncentraltexas.org/>

Midtown Commons at Crestview Station is a 73-acre multi-phase transit-oriented development that provides a variety of housing types and direct access to the Capital Metro Rail stop in Austin. Phase I provides 316 contemporary residential units consisting of efficiencies, lofts, mezzanine units and live-work units. The housing choices are supported by a concentration of office and retail in a pedestrian-friendly setting that accommodates minimal dependence on a car with direct train and bus access, as well as compelling walk-to-work and walk-to-home opportunities.

End of press release

Additional firm information including a complete list of projects, awards, publications, staff resumes and markets served is made available online at www.jhparch.com.