JHP designed Englewood Senior Apartments to target low income seniors in Pensacola, Florida. Englewood was one of the first new buildings in the city's Cervantes Street Redevelopment Corridor. It was designed to address Cervantes Street, a primarily retail and service corridor, with a 4 story wing and a street level arcade and stoops to create an urban streetscape. JHP scaled down the building height and added sunrooms where the site meets the surrounding single family neighborhood. The overall look and feel of the development meshes with historic structures along Cervantes Street and in the Pensacola area while giving residents many modern amenities associated with market rate developments.
